Introduction

1 Master the remote job search

Finding a remote data science dream job can be challenging, but as companies are expanding their data science teams, it's a great time to master your remote job search skills.

Identify Data Science Job Openings

2 Identify data science job types

Data science is a very broad field. After this lesson, you'll be able to identify which types of data science jobs fit your interests.

3 Find online job listings

Finding job listings online can help you prepare your resume and portfolio.

4 Fill your skill gaps

It is common for people to continually educate themselves in data science.

Create a Data Science Portfolio

5 Importance of a portfolio

While a resume matters, having a portfolio of public evidence of your skills can do wonders for your job prospects.

6 Showcase your projects

Even for an entry level role, most companies want to have people with at least a little bit of real-world experience.

7 Optimize your resume

Recruiters and hiring managers skim resumes very quickly, and you only have a short time to make an impression.

8

Write a cover letter

Though you may not need to write one, a good cover letter can only help your resume.

Build Your Online Presence

9

Optimize your LinkedIn profile

Unlike a resume, which is confined by length, a LinkedIn profile allows you to describe your projects and work experience in more depth.

10

Build your GitHub portfolio

GitHub can help show off your job aptitude.

11

Write a data science blog

A lot of data science is about communication and presenting data, and blogging is a great way of practicing.

Leverage Your Network

12

Identify valuable connections

Networking in any job hunt is important. After this lesson, you'll be able to identify who in your network you should be reaching out to.

13

Request a referral

Referrals are a great way to get your foot in the door.

Ace Your Interviews

14

Prepare for assessments

Case studies and take home assignments are common when you apply for a data science job.

15

Stand out remotely

Remote interviewing is just slightly different than in person interviewing.

16

Craft your follow-up strategy

Until you have a signed an offer and you have officially started, you should keep on applying.
