Introduction

1 Excel as a female leader

Elements to Excel as Women in Leadership

2 Own your story
Wins and losses are all part of the journey. After this lesson, you'll have three strategies for owning your story and using it to lead others.

3 Engage and connect your team
Great leaders create inclusive environments. In this lesson, you'll learn key strategies for creating an engaging workplace for your team.

4 Avoid the exclusion trap
Unchecked implicit bias can sink a good organization.

5 Growth mindset and inclusion
Women leaders can evolve an organization to be more diverse and inclusive.

6 Combat biases with approachability
Women encounter plenty of biases in the workplace, but if you are a female leader you need to anticipate those biases and plan a response.

7 What to do when you encounter bias
Everyone will encounter uncomfortable biases at some point in their career.

8 Honesty is the best policy
Being honest with yourself and your team is the hallmark of a good leader.

9 Exude confidence
Don't let negative self-talk run wild. After this lesson, you'll be equipped with tips to boost your self-confidence and think positively.

10 Get real with expectations
Be conscious of where you are now so you can grow from a place of stability.

11 Intentions become actions
Understanding your "why" will have a huge impact on yours and your team's trajectory toward success.

12 Encouragement from within
You have to be your own loudest cheerleader. After this lesson, you'll be able to root for yourself and foster that positivity in your team.

13 Your wellbeing is your priority
You can't take care of others if you aren't taking care of yourself.

14 Stop putting yourself last
Women are conditioned to put others first, but sometimes this can have a negative impact on you and your team.

15 Taking the good with the bad
Leadership, no matter gender, is a journey.

16 Leading through a crisis
Women make excellent crisis leaders.

Conclusion

17 A world of women in leadership
