Introduction

1 Going the virtual distance

In today's world, it's become increasingly important for leaders to work effectively with direct reports whom they don't see face-to-face on a daily basis.

Virtual Leadership

2 Structure and empathy

Outside of the traditional frameworks for leading remotely, you should also focus on building an environment that creates structure and empathy for your team.

3 The traditional factors

There are four traditional factors that drive the success of a virtual manager.

4 Areas of emphasis

There are several critical areas of emphasis for virtual leaders.

5 Maximizing schedules and technology

In a virtual environment, providing structure for your team will help them optimize their schedules and tasks.

6 Impacts and engagement

Working in a virtual environment can leave a lot of room for your team to become disengaged in tasks or meetings.

7 Transitioning your team

Teams across the globe have undergone a large amount of change recently that has led to a transition in the work environment.
